THIRTEENTH YEAR. NO. 11.

EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO, SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1897.

TWO CENTS

WOOL MEN STILL STIR

Determined to Have More Pleasing Tariff Duties.

THE RATES THEY WILL DEMAND.

Both Democrats and Republicans Tired of Tariff Debate—Democrats Will Not Delay, if Monetary Commission Plan Is Not Pushed.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The advocates in the senate of an increase in the duty on wool have held a meeting and decided upon the following as the rates which they will ask the committee to fix on wool:

First class, in grease, unskirted, 10 cents per pound; in grease, skirted, 12 cents per pound; if washed, double these rates; if scoured, treble.

Second class, in grease, unskirted, 11 cents per pound; in grease, skirted, 13 cents; if washed, double; if scoured, treble.

Third class, worth not exceeding 6 cents per pound, 3 cents duty; worth over 6 cents and not exceeding 10, 5 cents per pound; worth over 10 cents per pound, 8 cents duty; if scoured, treble.

These rates are much higher than those originally fixed by the senate committee, and the wool men regard them as more advantageous than those of the house bill or than the McKinley law.

There were present at the meeting 12 or 15 senators, representing all the states in which wool is an industry of especial importance.

The near approach of the wool schedule in the senate consideration of the tariff bill has caused the subject of the wool duties to receive unusual attention. There was at one time a prospect of a Republican caucus on the subject, but it was decided instead, to present the claims of the wool men to the finance committee with the hope that they would concede the increases asked. If the concession is not made a caucus is probable.

The schedule agreed upon was presented at the meeting of the Republican members of the senate finance committee. For over three hours the questions presented were discussed in a conversational way, but no definite conclusions were reached. Among the senators present who asked for an increase in the wool duties as proposed by the senate were Messrs. Mantle, Foraker, McBride, Hanna and Warren. Senator Penrose, in whose state are large manufacturers of woolen goods, also attended the meeting. It is probable that some compromise will be reached soon, but the question of just what rates will be finally recommended is still open.

The progress made with the tariff bill during the past few days has encouraged many senators to believe that the bill will be completed sooner than generally anticipated. There is a fair understanding between the Republican senators and their Democratic opponents that their bill will not be delayed in any manner by extended speeches made for the purpose of delay. The senators seem anxious to get away as soon as possible.

The Democrats will not come to any agreement as to fixing times for certain schedules to be considered or to limit the time in any manner until there can be a definite understanding as to the intention of the Republicans concerning the proposed monetary commission, which it is said the president will recommend before the adjournment of congress. Senators who are in charge of the opposition to the bill served notice on some Republican senators that if there should be an attempt to pass a bill for a monetary commission, or if the Democrats became convinced that it was the intention to bring forward such a measure, the debate on the tariff bill might be prolonged indefinitely.

They were willing to allow the tariff bill to go through with their protests against the increased rates, but they do not want to consider the commission bill at this session.

Whether this will have any effect upon the program of the Republicans has not yet been determined, but the desire of the Republicans to get the tariff bill through and get away from Washington may result in postponing any proposed action until next December.

DEMOCRATS HAD A SPAT.

Not Quite One Page of the Tariff Bill Disposed Of.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The tariff bill came to a halt in the senate, less than one page of the flax schedule being disposed of, by the debate drifting into political channels. Senators Bacon, Vest, Jones (Ark.) and Tillman took part in an exposition of Democratic doctrine on the tariff. It led to several lively exchanges, during which the cleansing of political "dirty linen" was frequently referred to.

Mr. Tillman's remarks were made with his characteristic vehemence and, at one point, he frankly stated concerning the tariff that if there was to be stealing, he wanted his share for South Carolina. Late in the day Mr. Morgan proposed a sweeping amendment to place a 10 per cent ad valorem duty on all articles now on the free list with a few stated exceptions, in supporting the amendment, Mr. Morgan called attention to the singular fact that the income tax feature of the Wilson bill is not repealed, and can be enforced by a change in the personnel of the supreme court of the United States.

Mr. Bacon criticised his associates for not supporting a revenue duty on raw materials and was warmly replied to by Mr. Vest, who called attention to the pleasure the Democratic discords gave Republicans. He tried to commit Mr. Bacon to the doctrine that he (Bacon) wanted his share of the plunder if there was to be a tariff robbery, but Bacon repudiated this and said he wanted benefits equalized. Mr. Tillman bluntly interjected that if there was to be a plundering he would see South Carolina got her share.

Cleared Edwards Also.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The jury under orders from the court has brought in a verdict of not guilty in the case of E. J. Edwards, New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, on trial for contempt of the senate sugar investigating committee.

MONEY FOR ORPHANS' HOME.

The Jr. O. U. A. M. Convention Adopted the Report of the Trustees.

PITTSBURG, June 19.—The report of the board of trustees of the Orphans' home at Tiffin, O., was adopted without change by the Jr. O. U. A. M. national council and an appropriation of $7,500 was made for the home for the ensuing year.

Another important question acted on was a proposed change in the matter of representation in the national council, but no change was made. The present representation is five for each state and one additional delegate for each 3,000 members.

The board of officers of the state of Pennsylvania and the legislative committee reported a resolution protesting against any cutting of the appropriation for public school purposes. The convention adopted the resolution unanimously. Adjourned finally.

At a meeting of the uniformed rank of the order the question of fixing a plan of insurance was finally disposed of. The contract with the Home Insurance company will expire in 90 days, and the national officers of the order were authorized to make a new contract.

After the initiation of about 30 new members the body adjourned. During the year six new councils were organized. The financial condition of the auxiliary was reported to be in good shape.

WARLIKE ORDERS.

The President Has Told Woodford to Tell Spain She Must Grant Freedom to Cuba or Fight, So a London Paper's Correspondent Says.

LONDON, June 19.—The Washington correspondent of The Daily Chronicle declares that President McKinley has instructed General Stewart L. Woodford, the minister-elect to Spain, to demand reparation and indemnity for the death of the late Dr. Ruiz.

He has also been told to intimate to Spain that if she refuses to grant freedom to Cuba she must be prepared to yield it by force, which would mean large sacrifices of men and money.

The Daily Chronicle alluding editorially to the receipt of this dispatch says: "We wait for confirmation before commenting upon the startling communication."

CHICAGO, June 19.—The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Herald says:

"General Woodford is instructed to impress upon the public men at Madrid these three vital points:

"First—The United States is not actuated by an unfriendly feeling toward Spain.

"Second—The United States does not desire to take advantage of Spain's troubles with her colony to bring about the annexation of Cuba to this country.

"Third—But unless Spain will herself make a move toward meeting the inevitable, toward giving Cuba freedom, the United States will be compelled to interfere, and in the case of intervention annexation might naturally follow.

"General Woodford is to impress upon the Madrid ministry the inevitable purpose of the United States to proceed toward the end in view, which is the emancipation of Cuba from the domination of Spain."

FOUR CHILDREN KILLED

Illinois Feeble-minded Building Hit by a Cyclone.

INDIANA TOWNS STORM SWEPT.

Sections of Nebraska, Iowa and Kentucky Also Visited by Destructive Tornadoes. A Boy Killed Opposite Irvington, Ky., in Indiana—Much Damage Reported.

LINCOLN, Ill., June 19.—A tornado which passed over the central and southern portions of Logan county destroyed thousands of dollars worth of property and completely demolished the immense cow barn on the farm of the state institution for the feeble-minded. Twenty-six persons seeking refuge from the storm were buried in the debris. Four of the refugees, boy pupils from Chicago, were taken out dead. Five others were severely injured, one of whom, the farm superintendent, will probably die.

The dead are: Sylvester Baker, James O'Brien, Neil McKenzie, Castle Lebaron. The injured are: Jacob Wilmot, farm superintendent, will probably die. Henry Borger, William Withem.

William Fisher, pupil, severely bruised and cut, will probably recover. Lemuel Gleason, attendant, serious internal injuries, may die. The institution for feeble-minded, containing over 700 inmates, seemed to be directly in the path of the storm and stringent measures were quickly taken to prevent a panic. The roofs of several of the buildings were carried away and much damage was done about the grounds, but the 700 inmates were under perfect control of the attendants, and the threatened panic and great loss of life was averted.

The tornado passed on to the northeast doing greater damage, the extent of which is yet unknown. The storm divided into two sections and covered a wide territory. It is feared that the loss of life will be greatly enlarged when reports are received from outside the city.

INDIANA SUFFERED SEVERELY.

Many Buildings Damaged and Destroyed. Man Killed.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 19.—Later returns received from throughout the state indicate that the storm did much damage. A telegram from Green Castle says that large quantities of valuable timber were destroyed, large trees being twisted off at their roots. Farm fencing and stock suffered severely and two large barns valued at $1,000 each were destroyed by lightning. One at Hambrick station containing some valuable livestock was destroyed. At Rochester and Brownsburg the damage was heavy to farm property. At Valparaiso a heavy hailstorm, accompanied by a high wind, did a great deal of damage to all kinds of property.

MUNCIE, Ind., June 19.—The west wing of the Paragon paper mill at Eaton was blown in during the storm. Four people are reported buried in the debris. The loss of property is $25,000. The roof on the Eaton Window Glass works was lifted off and much damage on other property was done. Several large roofs were caved in Muncie.

At English the courthouse was damaged to the extent of $3,000. A south-bound Monon train, eight miles beyond Bloomington, Ind., was struck by lightning and the passengers shaken up severely. Conductor Johnson was painfully injured, but will recover. Later as the train was nearing Gasburg it ran into a large tree that had been blown across the track and the engine was badly damaged.

In Jeffersonville the damage was slight, while in New Albany it is estimated that $10,000 worth of damage was done to property, but no lives were lost.

Opposite Irvington, Ky., in Indiana, the residence of John Streehls, a farmer, was wrecked by the wind and his 18-year-old son instantly killed. A servant girl was so badly injured by the falling timbers that she lived but a few hours.

NEBRASKA TOWNS SWEPT.

Houses Damaged and Blown Away and People Injured.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 19.—Violent windstorms prevailed over a wide district in Nebraska. In Lincoln some damage was done. At Monroe, west of here, the storm approached the violence of a tornado. Hardly a chimney is left in the town and many roofs were taken off. The house of Peter Tobin was totally wrecked and Mr. and Mrs. Tobin injured.

Norfolk suffered from the storm in the way of unroofed houses and small buildings blown away. Two men were injured, but not seriously.

DAMAGE DONE IN IOWA.

A Small Cyclone Smashed Trees and Small Buildings.

in several places just outside the town. The damage done was confined to the trees and outbuildings.

GAVE HANNA A HOT FIGHT.

Foraker Men Tackled the National Chairman in Primaries.

CLEVELAND, June 19.—The Republican primary election for the endorsement of M. A. Hanna for senator was one of the most bitterly contested primaries in the history of the city. A factional fight between the Foraker forces, represented by Mayor McKisson, and the Hanna forces had been precipitated. In order to concentrate their strength the Hanna forces had placed a legislative slate in the field. This slate was broken by the Foraker men, but the legislative delegation nominated will, however, vote for Mr. Hanna for United States senator, if elected next November.

The following nominations were made at the primaries:

State senators, Vernon H. Burke, Martin Dodge, Herbert W. Wolcott; state representatives, F. Bramley, Harry C. Mason, Joseph W. Parker, Levi E. Meacham, Charles H. Breck, Evan H. Davis, William H. Clifford, Charles E. Bowman, Alexander S. Henry; county commissioner, George A. Bennett; county treasurer, M. A. Lander; county recorder, J. C. Siegfried; coroner, W. P. Johnson.

BARNATO'S ALLEGED SISTER.

Mrs. Blackman of Cleveland Has Mysteriously Disappeared.

CLEVELAND, June 19.—Mrs. Blackman of this city, who claims to be the wife of Barnato, and who left for London about eight weeks ago, has mysteriously disappeared. A letter which was mailed in London about six weeks ago, was received by her daughter, who resides in this city.

In her letter Mrs. Blackman said that she would, in a few days, set sail for Johannesburg, Africa, to attempt to establish her identity as Barnato's wife. Since that time nothing has been heard from her, and the theory advanced by Detective Sleightsohn is that she has met with foul play.

Jackson, who became famous in the Pearl Bryan murder trial by testifying that he drove the carriage in which Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling conveyed their victim to the Kentucky highlands where her body was found, has been found guilty of perjury in a case where he had given testimony in a criminal trial in Springfield. Sentence has not been pronounced.

MARKED GAIN IN TRADE

Dun Says the Week Past Was Quite Noticeable.

THE INDUSTRIAL FIELD BETTER.

More Establishments Set to Work and More Hands Employed—Coke Production Increased—Wheat and Corn Are Higher—The Failures.

NEW YORK, June 18.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade issued today says: The retarding influence of cold and unseasonable weather has passed. The gain in business which, in spite of it was seen a week ago, has become clearer to all.

There is evidence of gradually enlarging business in every important department, more establishments have been set to work and more hands employed, and while prudence still hinders speculative excesses, the progress toward better things is unchecked. Reports from the various cities this week show a very general progress and a continuing large distribution through retail trade.

The proof is clearer, as it should be, in the industrial than in the trading field. Contracts providing for consumption of 7,000,000 tons of iron ore have already been made, 2,000,000 within the past fortnight, it is believed, though last year's contracts only terminated about two months ago. Bessemer ore is selling lower by 20 to 30 cents than at the outset. Biwabik at $2.25 against $2.55, but the heavy demand puts additional mines at work. The speculative purchase of 100,000 tons southern pig at $5.75 clears the deck for a larger business at better figures and sales at Chicago—150,000 tons—have been the largest for 18 months.

Reaction after the sudden purchase of 50,000 tons Bessemer at Pittsburg, leaves the price $9.50 per ton, but the heavy orders for bars there, and for 50,000 tons at Chicago, mainly for implement makers, with orders for many new buildings at the west, one of magnitude at Philadelphia and several at New York, the larger demand for plates and sheets, the order for 22 miles of pipe and the purchases of steel rails, which have started the new Joliet works with good orders are far more important than the speculation in materials.

Coke production has increased 2,500 tons, without change in price.

The demand for print cloths for the first time in many months has exceeded the week's production, and the price has risen a shade, while prints and other grades of cotton goods are in slightly better demand. There is a more widely distributed business in woollens than was expected.

In produce markets the year draws toward a close with slightly stronger prices for corn, owing to heavy foreign buying, and in cotton, owing to a better foreign demand, notwithstanding more encouraging crop reports. Wheat was hoisted nearly 2 cents, but fell about as much, closing a quarter higher for the week. Excellent reports from winter wheat regions west of Ohio had much influence, but still more the great but really unknown increase of spring wheat.

Failures for the week have been 193 in the United States, against 276 last year, and 36 in Canada, against 25 last year.

HAWAIIAN TREATY MUST WAIT.

Chairman Davis Says It Will Lay Over Until Next Session.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Senator Davis, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, says that he will not make an effort to press the Hawaiian treaty to final consideration to the senate during the present session of congress.

"While," he said, "the opposition to the ratification of the treaty is not formidable as to numbers, it has already been made evident that it will be quite determined and this fact coupled with the impossibility of holding a quorum for any length of time after the passage of the tariff bill has already forced the conclusion that an effort to secure immediate action would be futile; hence it will not be made. We shall, however," he added, "be able to get the treaty reported to the senate."

DEADLY CYCLONE IN FRANCE.

Twenty People Killed and Ninety Injured Near Paris.

PARIS, June 19.—A cyclone has swept over villages near this city. At Asnieres a fair was in progress. Everything was literally demolished. Two hundred trees were uprooted. The roof of Coignet's fireworks factory was blown off, a tall chimney was blown down and the boiler exploded, killing several persons and injuring 15. It is estimated that through the district over which the cyclone moved at least 20 persons were killed and 90 injured.

The Weather.

Fair, probably followed by local showers in southwest portion; winds shifting to eastern.

GAVE HANNA A HOT FIGHT.

Foraker Men Tackled the National Chairman in Primaries.

CLEVELAND, June 19.—The Republican primary election for the endorsement of M. A. Hanna for senator was one of the most bitterly contested primaries in the history of the city. A factional fight between the Foraker forces, represented by Mayor McCisison, and the Hanna forces had been precipitated. In order to concentrate their strength the Hanna forces had placed a legislative slate in the field. This slate was broken by the Foraker men, but the legislative delegation nominated will, however, vote for Mr. Hanna for United States senator, if elected next November.

The following nominations were made at the primaries:

MARKED GAIN IN TRADE

Dun Says the Week Past Was Quite Noticeable.

THE INDUSTRIAL FIELD BETTER.

More Establishments Set to Work and More Hands Employed—Coke Production Increased—Wheat and Corn Are Higher—The Failures.

NEW YORK, June 18.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade issued today says: The retarding influence of cold and unseasonable weather has passed. The gain in business which, in spite of it was seen a week ago, has become clearer to all.

There is evidence of gradually enlarging business in every important department, more establishments have been set to work and more hands employed, and while prudence still hinders speculative excesses, the progress toward better things is unchecked. Reports from the various cities this week show a very general progress and a continuing large distribution through retail trade.

The proof is clearer, as it should be, in the industrial than in the trading field. Contracts providing for consumption of 7,000,000 tons of iron ore have already been made, 2,000,000 within the past fortnight, it is believed, though last year's contracts only terminated about two months ago. Bessemer ore is selling lower by 20 to 30 cents than at the outset. Biwabik at $2.25 against $2.55, but the heavy demand puts additional mines at work. The speculative purchase of 100,000 tons southern pig at $5.75 clears the deck for a larger business at better figures and sales at Chicago—150,000 tons—have been the largest for 18 months.

Reaction after the sudden purchase of 50,000 tons Bessemer at Pittsburgh, leaves the price $9.50 per ton, but the heavy orders for bars there, and for 50,000 tons at Chicago, mainly for implement makers, with orders for many new buildings at the west, one of magnitude at Philadelphia and several at New York, the larger demand for plates and sheets, the order for 22 miles of pipe and the purchases of steel rails, which have started the new Joliet works with good orders are far more important than the speculation in materials.

Coke production has increased 2,500 tons, without change in price. The demand for print cloths has exceeded the first time in many months has exceeded the week's production, and the price has risen a shade, while prints and other grades of cotton goods are in slightly better demand. There is a more widely distributed business in woollens than was expected.

In produce markets the year draws toward a close with slightly stronger prices for corn, owing to heavy foreign buying, and in cotton, owing to a better foreign demand, notwithstanding more encouraging crop reports. Wheat was hoisted nearly 2 cents, but fell about as much, closing a quarter higher for the week. Excellent reports from winter wheat regions west of Ohio had much influence, but still more the great but really unknown increase of spring wheat.

Failures for the week have been 193 in the United States, against 276 last year, and 36 in Canada, against 25 last year.

HAWAIIAN TREATY MUST WAIT.

Chairman Davis Says It Will Lay Over Until Next Session.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Senator Davis, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, says that he will not make an effort to press the Hawaiian treaty to final consideration to the senate during the present session of congress.

"While," he said, "the opposition to the ratification of the treaty is not formidable as to numbers, it has already been made evident that it will be quite determined and this fact coupled with the impossibility of holding a quorum for any length of time after the passage of the tariff bill has already forced the conclusion that an effort to secure immediate action would be futile; hence it will not be made. We shall, however," he added, "be able to get the treaty reported to the senate."

DEADLY CYCLONE IN FRANCE.

Twenty People Killed and Ninety Injured Near Paris.

PARIS, June 19.—A cyclone has swept over villages near this city. At Asnieres a fair was in progress. Everything was literally demolished. Two hundred trees were uprooted. The roof of Coignet's Fireworks factory was blown off, a tall chimney was blown down and the boiler exploded, killing several persons and injuring 15.

It is estimated that through the district over which the cyclone moved at least 30 persons were killed and 90 injured.

The Way They Did It.

Chauncey M. Depew says that he has had personal experience in seeking office—not for himself, however, but for others—from every Republican president. He says that Mr. Lincoln would always listen attentively to what he had to say and then tell a funny story. On his way back to the hotel he would think over the story, and finally see that it landed his candidate way out of sight.

General Grant always received an application for office as toasts to the memory of Washington are drunk—standing and in silence.

President Hayes listened for awhile, then broke out into lamentations that the attention of the president of the United States should be diverted from the great affairs of state to distribute patronage. Then he would make a memorandum in a little red book, which was to remind him not to do it.

General Garfield would put his arm around your neck, tell you how much he loved you, and then forget what you had asked of him.

President Arthur would listen with polite attention to all you had to say, then refer you to some man in New York whom you were never able to find.

President Harrison would sink down into his chair until you had presented the claims of your candidate and then change the subject.

President McKinley's methods have not been developed.—Chicago Record.

The Way They Did It.

Chauncey M. Depew says that he has had personal experience in seeking office—not for himself, however, but for others—from every Republican president.

He says that Mr. Lincoln would always listen attentively to what he had to say and then tell a funny story. On his way back to the hotel he would think over the story, and finally see that it landed his candidate way out of sight.

General Grant always received an application for office as toasts to the memory of Washington are drunk—standing and in silence.

President Hayes listened for awhile, then broke out into lamentations that the attention of the president of the United States should be diverted from the great affairs of state to distribute patronage. Then he would make a memorandum in a little red book, which was to remind him not to do it.

General Garfield would put his arm around your neck, tell you how much he loved you and then forget what you had asked of him.

President Arthur would listen with polite attention to all you had to say, then refer you to some man in New York whom you were never able to find.

President Harrison would sink down into his chair until you had presented the claims of your candidate and then change the subject.

President McKinley's methods have not been developed.—Chicago Record.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., SATURDAY, JUNE 19.

SENATOR NELSON wants the sugar trust crushed out, in which Senator Nelson is much like the remainder of the country.

Now that congress is looking with favor upon bills for public buildings there is a possibility that East Liverpool may draw something more than a blank.

The wild eyed Spanish press is at last bowing to the inevitable, but with its accustomed excuse cannot now see dishonor, even though Spain should be compelled to let go its hold on Cuba.

WORK on the tariff bill is going on as rapidly as could be expected. The senators cannot get away from the temptation to talk, but are nevertheless making sufficient progress to show they are at work.

THE Democratic senators have no more formidable foe than the well closed Republican ranks. While they are wrangling and quarreling over various schedules, the Republicans are standing shoulder to shoulder fighting the fight of their lives.

McLEAN'S COSTLY CAMPAIGN.
John R. McLean is preparing to open wide his pocket book and dump its contents on the political soil of Ohio. It will be a costly campaign, and as he is the individual who expects to reap the greatest benefit there are no other wealthy aspirants to whom he can look for financial aid. Jones, Blackburn, Tillman, Morgan and Bryan are expected to stump the state, and these long winded gentlemen cannot live on wind. They must have something more substantial. Their expenses will be high. McLean must contribute liberally. They all love him of course, but they do not love him enough to warrant a sacrifice of time and talent without some return.

THE COUNTY DEMOCRACY.
There is no reason to believe that the Democrats will make more headway than usual in the race for county offices next fall. The Salem convention has some knotty problems to consider, and there is some question as to whether they can decide so as to please everybody. But that matters little. The issue is one which does not appeal with great force to the people. This thing of electing a senator from anywhere but Ohio does not meet with the approbation of Columbiana county. It thinks Buckeye men are qualified to fill Buckeye positions, and the indorsement of a man who has not for years been a resident of the state is not calculated to create the wildest enthusiasm.

JUDGE SMITH'S POSITION.
The conduct of Judge P. M. Smith throughout the trial of Zach Robison has been such as to meet the approbation of all with whom he has come in contact. Clear headed and learned he has never allowed an opportunity for a just and honest ruling to pass, while his brief personal examination of this or that important witness has done much to clear up more than one knotty point. There has never been a time when he has not shown the deepest interest in the case, his closest attention being given the most minute details. Many notable jurists have sat upon the Columbiana bench, but it is extremely doubtful if the place was ever occupied by a man who commanded respect as does Judge Smith.

Excursions to Columbus.
June 28 and 29 excursion tickets at one fare for the round trip will be sold to Columbus for the Democratic state convention; return coupons valid Thursday, July 1, inclusive.

SPENT A GOOD NIGHT

Zach Robison Is a Little Better Today.

FLOWERS FROM HIS SON

No One Was Allowed to See the Prisoner Last Night—The Jones Family Misunderstood the Terms on Which They Came. Good Speeches.

LISBON, June 19—[Special]—Zach Robison is somewhat better today, and it is believed that he will have recovered his strength when he enters the courtroom Monday morning.

When Robison left the courthouse yesterday it was only by a great effort that he succeeded in accompanying Deputy Bick to jail. His strength seemed to have forsaken him, and his face was bathed in tears. Upon reaching the jail he asked that no one be admitted to his cell, and the request was granted. He passed a good night, he says, and seemed very much better today. Before leaving town yesterday his son, Dave, sent him a huge bouquet of flowers. Robison seemed to appreciate the gift.

There was a scene at the station yesterday when the Jones family were about to leave the town. They had neglected to pay their board bill, and Deputy Supplee went after them. At the station they said they were under the impression that the state paid their expenses, and looked upon the board bill as good as paid. The deputy explained that they had made a mistake, and the bill was settled.

Lisbon is quiet today, and the attorneys interested in the Robison case are hard at work preparing their arguments. Doctor Eyman is expected here Sunday night, and will be on the stand early Monday morning.

Mr. Kelly will spend the summer at Birmingham, Pa., and will next fall enter the Cleveland law school.

The Corsican Vendetta.

We often see allusions to the Corsican vendetta, but few people know its real nature and to what a fearful degree of cruelty and bitterness it is carried. The vendetta consists in the practice of taking private vengeance upon those that have shed the blood of one's relatives. It is believed to have originated at the time of the Genoese domination in Corsica, when lawlessness was rampant and justice almost unknown.

As those in authority would not punish crime, individuals took the matter into their own hands, and long oppression, intensified by the cruelty to which we have referred, imbibed a people whose feelings are naturally deep and violent.

This spirit prevails among the women as well as among the men. They sing songs of vengeance over the body of the slain and display his blood stained garments. Sometimes a mother cuts a bloody shred from the dead man's clothing and attaches it to her son's dress, so that he may have a constant reminder of his duty in seeking revenge.

If a murder be committed and the murderer escape, vengeance may be taken upon his relatives, and as it may be taken whenever an opportunity offers the relatives live in constant apprehension and surrounded by incessant precautions. Persons that were "under the vendetta" have lived shut up in their houses for 10 or 15 years and have been shot the first time they dared to come out.

The vendetta is made all the more terrible by the force of public opinion, for it is considered in the highest degree dishonorable not to take the revenge called for, and the next of kin who fails to take it without delay falls under the contemptuous reproach of the community.—Philadelphia Times.

Value of Breathing Properly.

Thousands of people die every year because they do not know how to breathe, or, knowing how, they do not fill their lungs as they should. Thin, pale, sallow people should wrap themselves thoroughly if the weather is cool, step out upon an open porch or stand at an open window and fill the lungs moderately full, breathing precisely as one does for the most violent exercise—that is, in short, quick, deep inspirations, each one occupying not over two seconds. Use the muscles to expand the lungs and chest, and inhale all the air possible. If the exercise causes pain or giddiness, stop at once. This is the natural consequence of the action and does no harm, provided it is not continued. After a few minutes, when all unpleasant feeling has passed away, repeat the effort. This may be done two or three times within an hour or so and should be followed up day after day at intervals of from one to several hours. If the patient is very delicate, three times a day is enough for a beginning. In a very short time a marked improvement will be perceived. Another exercise with the lungs is to expand the chest with the muscles to its fullest extent, then fill the lungs and hold the breath as long as possible. This causes a heavy pressure of air on undeveloped and defective lung cells and after a time will open all of the passages of the lungs and create a condition of health to which a great many people are entire strangers.—New York Ledger.

Twisting Tobacco.

When the raw leaf tobacco reaches the factory, it is in large hogheads, packed tightly and done up in "hands," just as it comes from the curing house. The first process is to strip the stems out of the wide red leaves and smooth the heaviest of them into long strips for wrappers. These are dampened so they will roll readily without bursting. Then they are handed over to the skilled workmen, who turn them into handsome twists like magic. This process is most interesting and shows what skill may be acquired by practice. Each workman stands at a long table, upon which are piled the loose fillers and wrappers. At his right is a rack provided with a slat bottom, which allows the twists to dry. Deftly taking up a handful of loose tobacco and two long, slender leaves, the workman quickly transforms the mass into a long roll and doubles it into an ounce or two ounce twist. Each workman has a small counter scale at hand, set to weigh the exact amount of tobacco he is to put in each twist. So skillful do these men become that they scarcely ever miss the correct weight the fraction of an ounce. The best workmen roll from 1,800 to 2,000 of these twists a day.—Kansas City Star.

Photographing the Arteries.

After much study and painstaking an artery in the arm of an adult has been photographed. The patient had been suffering from some trouble in the arm which the physicians were unable to correctly diagnose. By means of the X rays deposits of lime salts in the blood were clearly shown, and the case was treated in accordance with the facts elicited by the photographing as described.—New York Ledger.

Clothes and Credit.

When a man realizes that he can't pay his debts and has got to ask for an extension of time, the first thing for him to do is to go to a fashionable tailor and get him a new suit of clothes. Creditors are seldom lenient with a seedy man.—Somerville Journal.

This causes a heavy pressure of air on undeveloped and defective lung cells and after a time will open all of the passages of the lungs and create a condition of health to which a great many people are entire strangers.—New York Ledger.

Twisting Tobacco.

When the raw leaf tobacco reaches the factory, it is in large hogsheads, packed tightly and done up in "hands," just as it comes from the curing house. The first process is to strip the stems out of the wide red leaves and smooth the heaviest of them into long strips for wrappers. These are dampened so they will roll readily without bursting. Then they are handed over to the skilled workmen, who turn them into handsome twists like magic. This process is most interesting and shows what skill may be acquired by practice. Each workman stands at a long table, upon which are piled the loose fillers and wrappers. At his right is a rack provided with a slot bottom, which allows the twists to dry. Deftly taking up a handful of loose tobacco and two long, slender leaves, the workman quickly transforms the mass into a long roll and doubles it into an ounce or two ounce twist. Each workman has a small counter scale at hand, set to weigh the exact amount of tobacco he is to put in each twist. So skillful do these men become that they scarcely ever miss the correct weight the fraction of an ounce. The best workmen roll from 1,800 to 2,000 of these twists a day.—Kansas City Star.

Photographing the Arteries.

After much study and painstaking an artery in the arm of an adult has been photographed. The patient had been suffering from some trouble in the arm which the physicians were unable to correctly diagnose. By means of the X rays deposits of lime salts in the blood were clearly shown, and the case was treated in accordance with the facts elicited by the photographing as described.—New York Ledger.

Clothes and Credit.

When a man realizes that he can't pay his debts and has got to ask for an extension of time, the first thing for him to do is to go to a fashionable tailor and get him a new suit of clothes. Creditors are seldom lenient with a seedy man.—Somerville Journal.

SHOT AT A MAD DOG

And After a Time Laid Him Low.

HE RAN THROUGH HOUSES

His Jaws Flaked With Foam—Parties Living In Grant Street and Calcutta Road Were Frightened Until After the Animal Was Dead.

A mad dog caused a great deal of excitement last evening on Calcutta road near Grant street. Early in the evening a dog, frothing at the mouth, dashed through the house of George Smart, snapping at the inmates. In the street it encountered a dog owned by Arthur Green and a fight ensued. The fight did not last long, and the animal resumed its mad career. A small boy, who was in the street, made a hasty exit, while Mr. Green came within an ace of being bitten. The neighborhood had by this time become aroused, and Joe Douglass and Ed Thompson procured their revolvers and started in search of his dogship. The animal ran through another house and was found in the alley. They opened fire but the animal seemed to bear a charmed life, and it took 12 shots before it was pronounced dead. It is probable the dog owned by Arthur Green will also be killed. The animal was a valuable bird dog and is supposed to belong to Harry Green, although the owner has not been found.

SOME COMPLAINT.

But Business Is Not as Bad as It Might Be. China, Glass and Lamps in speaking of the condition of the crockery trade says: "There is some complaint about the showing up of trade, but this feature is not general. Those potters making good quality and large variety are doing well, while we know of some who have pushed novelties and specialties and gotten out new shapes and decorations in dinner ware and toilets, are busy as they could wish, and not a few admit that they are behind in their orders. Many excellent new goods are being put on the market, and there never was a time in the history of American pottery when, on the whole, such bodies, glazes, shapes and decorations, at such low prices, were put before jobbers and consumers as during the past six months."

INSTALLED OFFICERS.

Daughters of St. George Have a Complete List. At the regular meeting of White Rose lodge, Daughters of St. George, the following officers were installed: President, Mrs. Martha Greenwood; vice president, Mrs. Lyth; secretary, Mrs. Bostock; recorder, Mrs. Lutton; treasurer, Miss Ellen Lewis; conductress, Miss Eliza Harley, Miss Lizzie Eardley; chaplain, Mrs. Massey; inside guard, Mrs. Jane Hancock; outside guard, Mrs. Gibson. Mrs. Charlotte Bostock was chosen delegate to the convention at Pautucket, R. I., Aug. 24.

DOING A NICE BUSINESS.

The Surprise 5 and 10 Store In the Swim. Messrs. Rayl and Allison, doing business at No. 102 Sixth street, are doing a nice business and rapidly building up an enviable trade. They keep a nice line of goods common to their branch of business, and sell at such reasonable rates that housekeepers find it decidedly to their advantage to deal with them. Our young townsmen are hustlers from away back, each with a host of friends in East Liverpool and vicinity, and they fully deserve the success which they are making.

CUT TWO ARTERIES.

Serious Accident While Mrs. Johnson Cleaned a Lamp Chimney. Mrs. Johnson, wife of Chief Johnson, was cleaning a lamp chimney when it broke in her hand last night. Two arteries in her right wrist were severed. Doctor Ogden and Doctor Andrews were called, but it was some time before the flow of blood was checked. Mrs. Johnson almost bled to death, but she is stronger today.

ENDORSED THE DOCTOR

Democrats Want Him to Go to the Convention.

ALL MUST BE SILVER MEN

Liverpool Will Be Represented at the Salem Gathering by Members of the Party Who Stand on the Chicago Platform—The City Meeting.

A number of the faithful met last evening at city hall for the purpose of electing 19 delegates to the Salem convention. The session was called to order by J. J. Weisend who explained the object of the meeting, and a diligent search was made for the men to make up the quota of delegates. They were at last secured and will go to Salem prepared to select tried and true Democrats to represent this district at the state convention. It was thought unwise to start the delegates on their journey without some instruction, and amid thunderous applause which threatened to cause city hall to fall in ruins, it was decided that they should cast their ballots for no man who was not known to stand upon the plank of free silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, and thought the Chicago platform was all right. To secure such a man, it was deemed unnecessary to go outside the meeting, and Hon. G. P. Ikirt's name was greeted with enthusiasm. Accordingly, on the first ballot the doctor is sure of 19 ballots. But little was said about the late campaign.

AN ADDRESS ON LABOR

Will Be Delivered by a High Official of the Carpenters. The Carpenter's union last evening received a communication from P. I. McGuire, general secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, stating that A. Cattermull, chairman of the general executive board, would be here July 8 to deliver an address on behalf of labor. An effort will be made to have the date changed to July 5 in order that the gentleman may address the crowd at the Brotherhood picnic.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Joe Williams was in Salineville on business today. —Mrs. James R. Hill is visiting in Martin's Ferry. —Doctor Navigo, of Georgetown, was in the city today. —Stel Moore and wife have moved to this city from Tiffin. —Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mason have returned from Lisbon. —J. J. Shannon, of Steubenville, was in the city on business today. —Charles Fisher and Myra Erlanger, yesterday rode their wheels to Lisbon. —Mrs. Willard Morris and son Leland have returned home from Sistersville. —Reverend Reinartz left for Walrose at noon today. He will preach there tomorrow. —Mrs. M. B. Johnson, superintendent of the industrial department of Mary Holmes seminary at West Point, Miss., is in the city, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gipner.

In Court.

Judgment in aid of execution was given, this morning, against Edward Hutton for $14. Martha Jackson sues William Hubbard for $12.50, claimed due for a board bill. W. B. Faulk has sued John Scott to recover $16.57.

Came Home Disappointed.

Many people who went to Lisbon yesterday, expecting to hear the arguments in the Robison case, returned last evening very much disappointed.

Hit by a Ball.

Gabell, the third baseman of the Three A's, was painfully injured yesterday in stopping a hot liner from the bat of McCurran.

Not the Decorator.

The J. Tarr who was arrested the other day for drunkenness, is not Jack Tarr, the well known decorator at the Dresden.

A Case.

E. T. Lippert yesterday obtained judgment for $187.30 against Cyrus A. Ragel. The case was before Justice Hill.

The odds are against the "Fats." But they are willing to wager that they will defeat the "Leans" on Tuesday afternoon next, June 22, at Rock Spring Park.

The Time I Short.

The question of the hour is, are you in the market for the best line of clothing in America? We must sell this stock at some low price. We have a customer for our stock when reduced to a certain point.

We are nearing that point very rapidly therefore, we say again the time is short, and if you are needing a spring suit, now is your opportunity to purchase at less price than manufacturer's price. Remember all is for sale, stock, fixtures and lease. All must go quickly at some price, as we are positively retiring from the business, and anxious to do so as quickly as possible. We say you can get prices of us that no firm in the state of Ohio can offer. Don't delay. This is an important matter for you.

CASAN, THE TARTAR DWARF.

A Fierce Little Mongolian Who Lived Centuries Ago.

In the series of papers on "Historic Dwarfs," in St. Nicholas, Mary Shears Roberts describes the famous Casan. Mrs. Roberts says:

Casan was the name of a little Mongol Tartar who flourished in the early part of the thirteenth century.

He was born in the eastern part of Asia, not far from the ancient city of Karakorum. His parents belonged to one of the barbarian hordes that owed allegiance to Genghis Khan, and Casan became a fierce though small warrior and fought bravely under the banner of the great and mighty Mongol conqueror.

The exact height of this little dwarf is unknown. He was certainly not over three feet tall, but he was active and muscular and, like all his race, could endure hunger, thirst, fatigue and cold.

The Tartars were unexcelled in the management of their beautiful horses. The fleetest animals were trained to stop short in full career, and to face without flinching wild beast or formidable foe. Casan was a born soldier, and at an early age became expert in all the exercises that belonged to a Tartar education. He could manage a fiery courser with great skill and could shoot an arrow or throw a lance with unerring aim, in full career, advancing or retreating.

Like many of those small in stature, he was anything but puny in spirit, and while yet a lad he gathered about him a troop of wild young Tartar boys as reckless and daring as himself, of whom by common consent he became leader. He commanded his lawless young comrades with a strange mixture of dignity and energy, and they obeyed his orders with zeal and willingness. Sometimes they would go on long hunting expeditions, seldom failing to lay waste any lonely habitation they happened on.

LOOKS LIKE A BEAR.

A Diminutive Animal That You Can Find In Water.

He really looks very much like a bear, though you must put him under a powerful microscope to see the resemblance. The extraordinary thing, however, about this tiny creature is that he is found in the gutters of houses, where he is at one time dry as dust and scorched by the blazing sun, at another active and full of life under a refreshing shower of rain.

The water bear is one of the Rotifer animalcules, and is of all of them the most capable of standing any extremes of temperature without giving up the ghost. He may be left dried up for months, even years, and yet on being put into water will expand and begin moving about and feeding vigorously. Although he cannot stand boiling water, he will live in dry heat at a far higher temperature, even up to 260 degrees F. One has actually been kept in vacuum for 30 days with sulphuric acid and chloride of calcium without losing his capability of revivification.

As for the reason why, it seems the little beasts' bodies are chiefly composed of albumen, which, it is well known, will stand a very high temperature without losing its solubility. Then, too, they are provided with two skins, one over the other, and these skins are wonderfully tough and elastic.

The water bear has the scientific name of tardigrada, because he takes life so easy. He is always fat and plump and spends his waking periods in constantly grubbing with his four pairs of legs among whatever rubbish comes in his way. Having eyes, brain and a nervous system, he is much ahead of his tribe, and is altogether one of the most interesting and amusing little animals known to science.—London Tit-Bits.

A Failure.

A certain professor in one of the leading schools of this city was not long since desirous of incorporating some negro dialect in a story he was preparing. Not being very well versed in their manner of speech, he bethought him that it would be a good idea to study the language in its purity undefiled. With this end in view he betook himself to the vicinity of the Union depot, near which representatives of the ebony race are always to be found.

One effort was enough. Meeting a coal black negro driving a wagon rather well loaded and accosting him as "Uncle John," the following brief dialogue ensued:

"Pretty heavy load, uncle. Can you get up the hill with it?"

"I do not know, sir, but I presume so."

Such an example of pure and undefiled English coming from such an unexpected source almost paralyzed the professor, who muttered something about the "degeneracy of the modern negro," and, mentally deciding to consult the works of "Uncle Remus," he retraced his steps to his apartments.—Nashville American.

Charitable Theory.

"I'd like to know who is sending me these anonymous letters," said the head of the firm.

"And fwat's that?" asked the porter.

"A letter without any signature, of course. This makes the third one I have received in two weeks."

"Perhaps," said Mike, "perhaps the poor man cannot write his name at all."

WHAT MY LOVE IS LIKE.

My love is like—is like a rose
Kissed by the morning dew,
Yet never rose brief summer knows
So fair, my love, as you.
And when vile winter withs the leaf
And the pink petals come to grief,
Stay, love, and shame the rose.

My love hath bosom like the snow,
Less cold and doubly fair,
But when earth's wintry fleece must go,
When spring breathes in the air
And flowers spring to bless the sight,
Love rules the heart with added might.
Stay, love, and shame the snow.

My love's dark eye shines like a star
When the rude day has fled.
Aye, fairer far, thy avatar
Brings blessings on my head.
The star, that distant bides, is wise
To shrink from rivaling thy eyes.
Stay, love, and shame the star.
—J. L. Heaton in "The Quilting Bee."

A SMOKESTACK PROBLEM.

Many Schemes That Failed Before the High Chimney Was Painted.

At the cement works on the west shore of Hempstead harbor there is a smokestack 123 feet high and 3 feet in diameter which has long needed painting. The manager thought the time had come to dispose of the job. Two of the foremen, the shovel engineer and a young carpenter set their wits to work to contrive a way of getting a rope up through the pipe's interior and down on the outside so that an apparatus could be rigged to hoist the painter.

One of the Italians suggested letting a pigeon loose to fly up inside of the stack, but this solved only half the problem. Another workman suggested a small balloon. The first one to formulate what seemed a feasible plan was the head foreman, who fastened 10 feet of small brass chain to a rocket, and to that a cord, and then sent them skylarking through the pipe. As a spectacle it was fine, but the heat from the powder burned off the chain, and the string was left at its starting point. Then the younger foreman tried. He had made a kite having two strings, one of which went through a pulley attached near the kite, which had a small iron weight fastened to its upper end, the intention being to fly the kite until it was directly over the smokestack, and then lower the weight down into the interior.

The kite worked beautifully until it was time for it to be useful, when it turned a somersault, tangling itself in the pulley tackle, and the whole thing came to grief. Then the carpenter began to talk. He, too, remembered boyish pastimes and believed they could be turned to account. His idea was to ascend the cable tower, 90 feet distant and 130 feet high, and from this position throw into the smokestack a weight tied to a string. The wind was blowing a gale, but this did not discourage the man, and he, with the two foremen, ascended the tower for performance No. 3.

To throw a two pound weight fastened to a string was no easy matter, and it was exceedingly difficult to keep a foothold on the tower. After three trials, however, the weight fell as planned, save that the string broke. Later the carpenter tried again, casting the weight four times before it entered the stack.

When the rigging to hoist the painter was in order, there was a call for volunteers, but only one man responded. He was the shovel engineer, Will Snyder, from Chicago. He has had an experience in work in high places, for whenever the steel cable, 140 feet above the ground, needs tarring Snyder gets a paint pot, swings himself astride the framework of the traveler and paints the cable as the traveler goes back and forth on its regular business.

Several of the men employed at the cement works seem to be born acrobats, and they work far up in the air as easily as on the ground, so that when repairs are needed on the towers or cables and cool, level headed men must be had there has never been any necessity to go outside of the regular force.—New York Sun.

An Englishman's Home Is His Castle.

The English principle that a man's house is his castle has recently been reaffirmed by an English crown court composed of the lord chief justice of England, Justices Hawkins, Grantham, Wright and Collins. It appeared that the defendant was convicted of a violation of the gaming act for inviting some of his cronies into his house for a game of cards, in the course of which he relieved one of them of £30. Owing to the payment of this sum by check, the loser's wife came to know the circumstances and informed the police, who initiated a prosecution against the winner for opening and, further, for using his house for illegal gaming. The case came before the quarter sessions, and the defendant was convicted; hence the appeal. The lord chief justice said that it would be monstrous to hold that this was a breach of the gaming act. The other judges concurred, and the conviction was quashed.—New York Sun.

Notes.

Sporting Life says this week: "George McNicol has been released by Toledo, at his request on account of a sprained shoulder. Manager Stroke says McNicol was the best shortstop in the Interstate League, and has a bright future before him."

George Carey in the last seven games he has played has had seven hits.

The rubber home plate at Rock Spring was stolen last week.

The East Liverpool ball team met last evening, and reorganized for the season. C. H. Shell resigned the management of the team, and a new man was selected. It was decided to place the players on salary, and they will be paid after every game. The regular men are playing this afternoon.

Percy Baxter, who is playing with West Sunbury, Pa., has received an offer from Springfield, Mass. Doc Howard will join the Cuban Giants next week. William Chambers, of East End, has signed to catch for Toronto.

HOME FROM CHILLICOTHE.

The Grand Army Boys Had a Pleasant Time.

Hon. A. H. McCoy and D. J. Smith have returned from Chillicothe, where they attended the state encampment of the Grand Army. Mt. Vernon was selected as the next place of meeting, the railroads giving a rate of one cent a mile. General Kissinger was elected commander after a spirited contest, the four votes from this district deciding the choice of the encampment. Cincinnati was recommended as the place for holding the national encampment next year, and Alex McGraw was made a delegate to Buffalo. Ringing resolutions in behalf of Cuba were adopted, and the service pension bill was endorsed. The old soldiers were royally entertained, and came home well satisfied.

St. Stephen's Church Will Give a Pleasing Entertainment.

On next Tuesday evening, June 22, the members of St. Stephen's church will give a "Grand Queen's Jubilee tea and Entertainment," from 5 to 8 o'clock. The tickets are now on sale, admission being placed at 25 cents. Proceeds will be applied to the parish debt.

BEATS ARE TOO LONG

An Officer Makes Known His Complaint.

WHEELMEN RIDE TOO FAST

For Policemen to Stop Them, and They Cannot Be Recognized at Night—Some Things That Would Increase the Efficiency of the Force.

EDITOR NEWS REVIEW:—I do not believe that your paper has the desire to do any member of the East Liverpool police force an injustice. On the contrary, I believe that, all things being anywhere near equal, you will give him the best of the situation, as common sense teaches that the roundsman, or guardian of the peace, has a pretty hard row to hoe, beset as he is by all the rough and lawless element, especially when he enforces the laws and ordinances laid down for the control of the city. If the police officer does his duty, then he should have the support and backing of every good citizen. If he neglects or dodges his duty, then he should be dismissed from the force, and this will be his fate, if mayor and marshal are the right men for the place.

And now let me mention a few of our difficulties. How can we arrest bike riders when we do not know them? They dash past us in the night time, at the rate of thirty miles an hour, endangering other riders and pedestrians, and simply laugh at us when we call out to them. If we know them, we can make complaint at headquarters and cite them to appear before the mayor. If we don't know them, which is often the case, we can do nothing. If riders ride without the use of the handle bars, the fools not only endanger themselves, but everybody else on the street; but there is no law to forbid them so doing in East Liverpool. If our councilmen will give us laws to guide us, or our superior officers give us instructions how to act in such cases, we will make it exceedingly interesting for all such offenders.

Now note the following, Mr. Newspaper Man: How can we protect the public after midnight. After that hour there are two roundsmen on duty. The beat of one of these extends from the Diamond to Jethro bridge, and he must take care of all the surrounding country. The beat of the other extends from the Diamond to the limits of the East End, and all the surrounding country. Do you express surprise at the fact that at times you cannot see or find a policeman?

Further, if you could but see, as we see, how very careless some merchants and business men are about their premises, respecting open doors and open windows, left so by themselves or careless clerks, you would simply wonder that there are not more burglaries and robberies committed than there are.

ROUNDSMAN.

Summer Outing.

The principal places of summer sojourn along the Atlantic ocean in the Alleghenies, the Adirondacks, Catskills, and mountains of the east, and in the lake region and Northern Michigan and the northwest, may be readily reached over the Pennsylvania lines.

Special information regarding the leading resorts and the advantages enjoyed in journeying to them over the Pennsylvania route has been compiled and printed in convenient form. WOMEN'S CLUBS IN INDIA.

They Are Not Devoted to High Ideals, and Social Lines Are Marked Plainly.

In India clubwomen do not aim at realizing lofty ideals. There comfort and amusement are the avowed objects of all women's organizations. Debates are never held, papers are never written and therefore never have to be listened to, and the gravest problems discussed are the probabilities of Captain A.'s marrying Miss B. on his small income, the wonderful power that Mr. X. has over the deputy commissioner, whose wife lives "at home"—that is, in England—and the scandalous report that General Z.'s great-grandmother was "dark." A person who has never been in India cannot comprehend the gravity of this last matter. Such an accusation is worse than saying that a man had no great-grandmother at all.

The clubhouse is a large, roomy bungalow, the most attractive thing about it being the broad gallery, which extends all the way around and is inclosed with latticework. The bungalow includes four or five rooms, by far the most important being a bar where refreshments, principally liquid, are served. The largest room is—whisper it not in woman clubdom—devoted in the main to dancing. It has a parquet floor, and at least once a week a dance is given by the club members. This room is also let to people wishing to give balls, and here bachelors and grave widowers are permitted to give their women friends little dinners or theater supper parties.

Another room, much smaller, is used as a library. It is furnished with tables covered with the latest magazines and newspapers and a couple of bookshelves filled with novels of the day and such works of light weight science and philosophy as have made a stir in the reading world. To say that a woman has read the last is equivalent to saying that she has something in her. A drawing room and dressing room complete the house, for such a thing as a residential club for women is still unheard of in India. A brown, bespectacled native sits on duty at a table on the veranda. His function is to keep the accounts and to send round the subscription book every month, when collections are made.

The clubwomen all go in for athletics. Attached to every clubhouse is a large hall with an earthen floor. This is covered with matting, and here that most exciting game, badminton, is played in the cool of the morning and afternoon. Sometimes tournaments are held. On dance nights this court is utilized as a promenade, when it is lighted with Chinese lanterns and decorated with potted plants. Tennis courts are also frequently attached to the building, and a regiment of small boys in uniform is on hand to get the balls.

The clubhouse is invariably located where the regimental band plays on certain evenings. On such occasions every one sits at small tables on the lawn, eating ices, drinking cooling beverages and discussing the coming races or the prospects for the next season at Simla. Children are admitted on these days, though ordinarily a placard tells them plainly that they are not wanted.

This is the smart women's club. Another variety of club flourishes in India at big stations and is devoted to women who are not quite at the top notch of Anglo-Indian swiftness. Its membership consists of those who attend the big balls and general gatherings at the government house, but are left out in the cold when it comes to the Sunday dinners and small dances. The wives of the cavalry officers and those who value their reputation as belonging to the upper crust shun these Murghie Khanas, as they are called, and their members as they would the plague itself. One who enters such a club will find that the company consists of a crowd of women engaged in discussing domestic affairs, such as which is the best soap for washing dish cloths or how to keep babies' flannels white. When a woman becomes domestic in India she becomes very domestic. There is no betwixt and between. Her horizon is a narrow one. Art, literature and the affairs of the nation have no place in her mind. Into such a club man rarely ventures. If one does stray in, it always turns out that he is after one of two things—a new after dinner story or volunteers to do some work, such as decorating the church, for example.

Subscriptions to women's clubs in India vary from 7 rupees up, according to the station and reputation of the club. There is an admission fee and members are elected by ballot. It is said that the temptation to drop in a black ball as a form of revenge for some former slight, real or fancied, often overcomes a member, but woe to her if she is discovered, for her sister members make it hot for her.—New York Sun.

Pavement Gray.

Pave or pavement gray is the very newest of the new tints of this popular color. It is not as becoming as it is fashionable, for there is neither a hint of rose, cream nor fawn in the shade. Geranium, turkish and cerise reds are severally used as a touch of color to relieve gowns made wholly of pavement gray, for it is a metallic dye more exacting than any worn since the days of zinc gray, that was the regulation color for brides' traveling costumes and a shade that would detract greatly from the good looks of Venus herself. There is no necessity, however, for selecting this particular color other than from the reason that it heads the list of grays approved by fashion, for the stores are this season filled with beautiful fawns and grays—grays that combine exquisitely with mauve or violet. Other shades melt into sage and delicate olive tones that admit of touches of blue on the bodice, and other familiar grays are shown that make stylish costumes relieved with white or yellow.—New York Post.

BEARS THAT MIGRATED.

Instances of Their Gathering and Marching Away Together.

Manly Hardy writes to The Forest and Stream about bears that migrated: "The first notice of these migrations is to be found in a book by John Josselyn, entitled 'New England Rarities Discovered,' published in 1873. In this book he says that great companies of bears sometimes traveled across what is probably the Piscataqua river.

"About 70 years ago, early in September, my father one night witnessed a bear migration. The night was a clear one. The bears came to the east bank of the Penobscot river in the town of Orrington, about seven miles below Bangor. The bears could be heard calling and answering each other till low water, when they took to the water, swam across and landed on the Hampden side. In the morning it was found that a large number had crossed. My father saw their tracks across a single plank in a shipyard.

"Again, about 30 years ago, a friend of mine, Henry Clapp, who is quoted in Cassin's 'Standard Natural History' as an authority on bears, told me that during the fall he had gone on a trapping trip, but had found few bears, till one morning in November after a snowfall he found the tracks of nine different bears, all headed up one little valley. For several days after that more bear tracks were found, all headed in the same direction—from east to west. They denuded up when it came time to do so, and in the spring headed east again.

"It is believed among sportsmen that bears go back into the woods to den up and come to the vicinity of the clearings every spring, but extensive migrations by bears are as little heard of as those of wild turkeys and prairie chickens. What naturalists do not understand is how the animals, which usually scatter over miles of territory, know how, when or where to get together for their trips."

A CLEVER FORGER.

But He Overshot the Mark and Was Trapped by the Bank.

Not long ago there stood before the paying teller's window of one of New York's big banks an unctuous little man smiling blandly over a $100 check. Signature, indorsement and every detail were correct. To make assurance doubly sure, the little man explained with some insistence, "You see, I have had my indorsement certified."

The check was paid without hesitation, but the teller said to himself, "Why is that idiot standing there with such a broad grin, trying to fix his face on my memory?" And duly he took note.

A few days later the man appeared at the window again, his countenance distended in the same smile, with another check from the same firm. The indorsement was certified in exactly the same way, and this time the amount was $900. There was absolutely nothing wrong with the check on its face, and it came from a well known customer of the bank. "In spite of all," said the paying teller, "something told me that fellow was a crook. So I said I should have to look up the account before it could be paid, and while he waited I slipped around to the firm's office, which was only a short distance away.

"The check was examined and pronounced perfectly good, and I was about to walk away when the head of the firm said: 'Why, hold up. We've issued no checks this morning.' And then I went back and bagged my crook. He had first sold the firm a bond and got his original $100 check in payment. This he had used to imitate the firm's signature on the second and likewise to impress me with the fact that he was all right, so that when he came around a second time I would not bother him."

LANCASTER, Pa., June 19.—Umpire Weidmann narrowly escaped rough usage at the hands of angry Richmond players here. Weidmann declared McDonald out at the plate. McDonald grabbed hold of the umpire and was throttled by a policeman. The whole Richmond team swarmed around the umpire. The home players came to his rescue. Excited spectators punched Stuart and Steelman. No blood was spilled nor bones broken.

Active, Passive and Neuter.

A little grammar found in an old garret at Portland, N. H., has illustrations of the rules as follows: The active, passive and neuter verbs are represented by the picture of a father whipping his little boy. The father is active, the boy is passive and the mother sitting by herself on a stool looking on, but doing nothing, is neuter.

BEATS ARE TOO LONG

An Officer Makes Known His Complaint.

WHEELMEN RIDE TOO FAST

For Policemen to Stop Them, and They Cannot Be Recognized at Night—Some Things That Would Increase the Efficiency of the Force.

EDITOR NEWS REVIEW:—I do not believe that your paper has the desire to do any member of the East Liverpool police force an injustice. On the contrary, I believe that, all things being anywhere near equal, you will give him the best of the situation, as common sense teaches that the roundsman, or guardian of the peace, has a pretty hard row to hoe, beset as he is by all the rough and lawless element, especially when he enforces the laws and ordinances laid down for the control of the city. If the police officer does his duty, then he should have the support and backing of every good citizen. If he neglects or dodges his duty, then he should be dismissed from the force, and this will be his fate, if mayor and marshal are the right men for the place.

And now let me mention a few of our difficulties. How can we arrest bike riders when we do not know them? They dash past us in the night time, at the rate of thirty miles an hour, endangering other riders and pedestrians, and simply laugh at us when we call out to them. If we know them, we can make complaint at headquarters and cite them to appear before the mayor. If we don't know them, which is often the case, we can do nothing. If riders ride without the use of the handle bars, the fools not only endanger themselves, but everybody else on the street; but there is no law to forbid them so doing in East Liverpool. If our councilmen will give us laws to guide us, or our superior officers give us instructions how to act in such cases, we will make it exceedingly interesting for all such offenders.

Now note the following, Mr. News-paper Man: How can we protect the public after midnight. After that hour there are two roundsmen on duty. The beat of one of these extends from the Diamond to Jethro bridge, and he must take care of all the surrounding country. The beat of the other extends from the Diamond to the limits of the East End, and all the surrounding country. Do you express surprise at the fact that at times you cannot see or find a policeman?

Further, if you could but see, as we see, how very careless some merchants and business men are about their premises, respecting open doors and open windows, left so by themselves or careless clerks, you would simply wonder that there are not more burglaries and robberies committed than there are.

The bears could be heard calling and answering each other till low water, when they took to the water, swam across and landed on the Hampden side. In the morning it was found that a large number had crossed. My father saw their tracks across a single plank in a shipyard.

"Again, about 30 years ago, a friend of mine, Henry Clapp, who is quoted in Cassino's 'Standard Natural History' as an authority on bears, told me that during the fall he had gone on a trapping trip, but had found few bears, till one morning in November after a snowfall he found the tracks of nine different bears, all headed up one little valley. For several days after that more bear tracks were found, all headed in the same direction—from east to west. They denuded up when it came time to do so, and in the spring headed east again.

"It is believed among sportsmen that bears go back into the woods to den up and come to the vicinity of the clearings every spring, but extensive migrations by bears are as little heard of as those of wild turkeys and prairie chickens. What naturalists do not understand is how the animals, which usually scatter over miles of territory, know how, when or where to get together for their trips."

A CLEVER FORGER.

But He Overshot the Mark and Was Trapped by the Bank.

Not long ago there stood before the paying teller's window of one of New York's big banks an unctuous little man smiling blandly over a $100 check. Signature, indorsement and every detail were correct. To make assurance doubly sure, the little man explained with some insistence, "You see, I have had my indorsement certified."

The check was paid without hesitation, but the teller said to himself, "Why is that idiot standing there with such a broad grin, trying to fix his face on my memory?" And duly he took note.

A few days later the man appeared at the window again, his countenance distended in the same smile, with another check from the same firm. The indorsement was certified in exactly the same way, and this time the amount was $900. There was absolutely nothing wrong with the check on its face, and it came from a well known customer of the bank. "In spite of all," said the paying teller, "something told me that fellow was a crook. So I said I should have to look up the account before it could be paid, and while he waited I slipped around to the firm's office, which was only a short distance away.

"The check was examined and pronounced perfectly good, and I was about to walk away when the head of the firm said: 'Why, hold up. We've issued no checks this morning.' And then I went back and bagged my crook. He had first sold the firm a bond and got his original $100 check in payment. This he had used to imitate the firm's signature on the second and likewise to impress me with the fact that he was all right, so that when he came around a second time I would not bother him."—C. D. Lanier in Scribner's.

LANCASTER, Pa., June 19.—Umpire Weidmann narrowly escaped rough usage at the hands of angry Richmond players here. Weidmann declared McDonald out of the plate. McDonald grabbed hold of the umpire and was throttled by a policeman. The whole Richmond team swarmed around the umpire. The home players came to his rescue. Excited spectators punched Stuart and Steelman. No blood was spilled nor bones broken.

Active, Passive and Neuter.

A little grammar found in an old garret at Portland, N. H., has illustrations of the rules as follows: The active, passive and neuter verbs are represented by the picture of a father whipping his little boy. The father is active, the boy is passive and the mother sitting by herself on a stool looking on, but doing nothing, is neuter.

DEFENDED HIMSELF.

COST BANDMANN "A HUNDRED AND FIFTY, BUT WAS WORTH IT."

How Clay Clement Became an Expert Swordsman—After the Initial Encounter the Tragedian Forgot All About the Expensive Training.

Clay Clement is one of the most expert swordsmen on the American stage. His proficiency with the broadsword is due to a long course of training which he took many years ago under rather peculiar circumstances.

Young Clement carried a letter of introduction to Daniel Bandmann, the tragedian, and asked for an engagement. The old man was charmed with Clement's reading of Shakespeare and after a long eulogical trial remarked in a rich brogue: "My boy, I think you will do. You are engatched. But, tell me, are you able to defend yourself?"

"Why, yes; I guess so," doubtfully replied the young aspirant. "I don't know. I never had a fight in my life, but I think I could take care of myself in a pinch."

"Vell," continued Bandmann, "you'll haf to. I want a man who can fight. Ven I play Richard, eet makes me sick—pah—if I must be kilt by a Richmond who could not kill a cheeken in real life. Ven I am Macbeth, vy should I be kilt by a fellow who could not carve a cheese? I am tired of et all. You must defend yourself. Do you know the broadsword?"

"Well, no—I don't," admitted Clement. "But couldn't I learn?" he added eagerly.

"Ha, yes—inspee-ration!" cried Bandmann. "You shall learn. Do you know my friend Colonel Monstery of Chicago? No? Neffer mind; I gif you a letter to him."

Turning to a writing desk, Bandmann wrote a letter of introduction and filled out a check for $25.

"Gif dose to my friend Monstery," he said, "and he vill show you how you shall defend yourself. That check vill pay for 25 lessons. If you feel you need more lesson, my letter say you shall take as many more as you like and the bill I vill pay. But, remember! You must fight; if not, I think I vill keel you—yes."

Clement came to Chicago to begin instruction. In this city he met several actors who formerly had been members of Bandmann's company. They all told the same story. The tragedian, they said, was a most dangerous antagonist in a stage duel, and very often forgot his surroundings and put up a real fight. If his opponent showed the white feather, the old man would fly into a paroxysm of rage and fight like a demon. On more than one occasion he had completely driven Richmond and Macduff off the stage.

These stories scared Clement half to death. He began to regard his training as a life and death matter, undertaken strictly in self defense. At the end of the 25 lessons he felt that he was only a beginner in swordsmanship, and instruction was continued week after week throughout the entire summer.

On the opening night of Bandmann's next season a letter was handed to the tragedian. It contained a bill "for professional instruction in sword practice—extra lessons for Mr. Clement on account of Mr. Bandmann—$150."

The old man gasped. "Vot!" he cried. "Are you drunk or am I crazy? A hundred fifty tollar! How ees eet? How can it be?"

"Well, you sent me to Colonel Monstery yourself and gave him carte blanche to teach me as long as I needed instruction," explained Clement.

"Oh, my poy, my poy!" exclaimed Bandmann. "I sent you to Monstery—yes—but I deed not tell you to leewe with heem."

Suddenly the old man stopped. "Vell," he said, "how ees eet? Can you defend yourself?"

"I'll try," was the calm reply.

"So vill I," sentimentously remarked Bandmann.

That night when Richard faced Richmond on Bosworth field there was a baleful gleam in the crooked backed monarch's eyes which none of the company ever had observed before. He sprang at his antagonist like a catamount; two swords clashed and a shower of sparks gave evidence of the force which sent them together. Then followed what was probably the prettiest and most scientific sword fight ever seen on the American stage. The old man fought wickedly, dangerously, desperately. The aggressor, at first, he pressed his young antagonist hard. The air was filled with sparks from the circling swords and the clash of steel was almost continuous. Then Clement began work in earnest. Step by step the bloody monarch was forced backward, and his blows were parried and beaten down, until at last, from sheer exhaustion, his grip was loosened and a deft blow sent his sword flying into the wings. A moment later Richmond's victorious troops were cheering over the death of Gloster and the play was ended.

A couple of solicitous actors helped Bandmann to his feet. Panting and almost breathless, he flung his arms about Clement, kissed him on both cheeks and exclaimed, "It cost me a hundred and fifty, but it was wort' it."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Kings Who Have Murdered.

King Louis II of Bavaria, the elder brother and predecessor of "mad King Otto," killed a couple of men during his reign, one in a fit of fury, the other by accident, while he drowned a third—his medical attendant—he himself succumbing at the same time.

The late King John of Saxony became insane three days prior to the date officially declared to be that of his death. His madness first assumed a violent form at a grand court ball, and 24 hours later he shot or killed with his sword one of his military aids.

The crown prince of Austria shot and killed the Baroness Marie Vetsera before he took his own life, one somber January morning.

The late Emperor of Russia shot and killed Count Rernum, one of the officers of his household, under the impression that the count was a nihilist and a would be assassin. The count approached the czar in the dark at Gatchina, and as he neared the emperor made a movement that led his majesty to believe that the stranger was getting some weapon ready for murder. Without an instant's hesitation Alexander drew a revolver and shot the man dead, realizing too late his terrible mistake.

The father-in-law of the Infanta Eulalia of Spain, the late Duke of Montpensier, was responsible for the death of his cousin, Prince Henry of Bourbon, whom he shot in a duel at Madrid.

It was called a duel, but some would call it murder. The adversaries were to fire alternately, and, Prince Henry's bullet flying wide of the mark, the Duke of Montpensier walked quietly up to the prince and shot him through the head.—Pearson's Weekly.

He Kept His Seat.

During one of the naval engagements of the late war a sailor by the name of John Davis performed an act of bravery that has rarely been equaled. While the battle was at its height a shell entered the Valley City, of which ship Davis was gunner's mate, and exploded on the berth deck, setting it on fire.

Captain Chaplin, the commander of the vessel, jumped down into the magazine, and while directing his men to extinguish the flames passed up with his own hands the loose cylinders of powder. The fireworks on board became ignited. Rockets whizzed and blue lights blazed up in the very midst of the ammunition. The shellroom caught fire, and it seemed as if the Valley City must be blown to pieces.

John Davis, appreciating the danger and desirous of doing all in his power to avert it, jumped up on an open barrel of gunpowder and sat down on the head, covering it with his person as well as he could to protect it from the showering sparks.

Captain Chaplin, seeing him quietly seated while everybody else was at work, ordered him in peremptory tones to "get down and help put out the fire."

The young gunner's mate staid where he was and replied calmly:

"Don't you see, sir, I can't, for if I do the sparks will fall into the powder. If I get down, captain, we shall all go up."

Notwithstanding the terrible danger, Captain Chaplin could not repress a smile, and Davis' heroic action was rewarded after the battle by immediate promotion.—Youth's Companion.

The Bookseller.

I must at once discriminate between the bookseller and the publisher, as it is the former with whom I have to do on the present occasion. There was not always a distinction between the one and the other, as the Lintots, the Curlls and the Tonsons, though they designated themselves booksellers, were at the same time publishers, and it was only in the early years of the present century that booksellers who published books ceased to style themselves booksellers. The bookseller of today is to be regarded as a book distributor and not as a book producer. It has become a fashion in some quarters to belittle his occupation and not afford him the place which he should occupy in the commonwealth of letters. That he has an important place to fill and that he seeks to fill it with all his faculties, I hold. That there are booksellers and booksellers I will at once freely admit, and to those who have entered a profession for which they have neither ability nor qualifications I give but scant courtesy.—Academy.

Pat Sheedy's Lament.

"Show me a gambler with a bank account. Show me one with a bit of real estate. You can't do it. Pat Sheedy, hasn't got any of it. If he had, would he be chasing around the most obscure corners of the earth? No, sir. I can't gamble here, and I must gamble to live. I make my living at it, and a poor living it is. DEFENDED HIMSELF.

COST BANDMANN "A HUNDRED AND FIFTY, BUT WAS WORTH IT."

How Clay Clement Became an Expert Swordsman—After the Initial Encounter the Tragedian Forgot All About the Expensive Training.

Clay Clement is one of the most expert swordsmen on the American stage. His proficiency with the broadsword is due to a long course of training which he took many years ago under rather peculiar circumstances.

Young Clement carried a letter of introduction to Daniel Bandmann, the tragedian, and asked for an engagement. The old man was charmed with Clement's reading of Shakespeare and after a long elocutionary trial remarked in a rich brogue: "My poy, I think you will do. You are engatshed. But, tell me, are you able to defend yourself?"

"Why, yes, I guess so," doubtfully replied the young aspirant. "I don't know. I never had a fight in my life, but I think I could take care of myself in a pinch."

"Vell," continued Bandmann, "you'll haf to. I want a man who can fight. Ven I play Richard, eet makes me sick—pah—if I must be kilt by a Richmond who could not kill a cheeken in real life. Ven I am Macbeth, vy should I be kilt by a fellow who could not carve a cheese? I am tired of it all. You must defend yourself. Do you know the broadsword?"

"Well, no—I don't," admitted Clement. "But couldn't I learn?" he added eagerly.

"Ha, yes—inspee-ration!" cried Bandmann. "You shall learn. Do you know my friend Colonel Monstery of Chicago? No? Neffer mind; I gif you a letter to him."

Turning to a writing desk, Bandmann wrote a letter of introduction and filled out a check for $25.

"Gif dose to my friend Monstery," he said, "and he vill show you how you shall defend yourself. That check vill pay for 25 lessons. If you feel you need more lesson, my letter say you shall take as many more as you like and the bill I vill pay. But, remember! You must fight; if not, I think I vill keel you—yes."

Clement came to Chicago to begin instruction. In this city he met several actors who formerly had been members of Bandmann's company. They all told the same story. The tragedian, they said, was a most dangerous antagonist in a stage duel, and very often forgot his surroundings and put up a real fight. If his opponent showed the white feather, the old man would fly into a paroxysm of rage and fight like a demon. On more than one occasion he had completely driven Richmond and Macduff off the stage.

These stories scared Clement half to death. He began to regard his training as a life and death matter, undertaken strictly in self defense. At the end of the 25 lessons he felt that he was only a beginner in swordsmanship, and instruction was continued week after week throughout the entire summer.

On the opening night of Bandmann's next season a letter was handed to the tragedian. It contained a bill "for professional instruction in sword practice—extra lessons for Mr. Clement on account of Mr. Bandmann—$150."

The old man gasped. "Vot!" he cried. "Are you drunk or am I crazy? A hundred fifty tollar! How ees eet? How can it be?"

"Well, you sent me to Colonel Monstery yourself and gave him carte blanche to teach me as long as I needed instruction," explained Clement.

"Oh, my poy, my poy!" exclaimed Bandmann. "I sent you to Monstery—yes—but I deed not tell you to leev with heem."

Suddenly the old man stopped. "Vell," he said, "how eez eet? Can you defend yourself?"

"I'll try," was the calm reply. "So vill I," sententiously remarked Bandmann.

That night when Richard faced Richmond on Bosworth field there was a baleful gleam in the crooked backed monarch's eyes which none of the company ever had observed before. He sprang at his antagonist like a catamount; two swords clashed and a shower of sparks gave evidence of the force which sent them together. Then followed what was probably the prettiest and most scientific sword fight ever seen on the American stage. The old man fought wickedly, dangerously, desperately. The aggressor, at first, he pressed his young antagonist hard. The air was filled with sparks from the circling swords and the clash of steel was almost continuous. Then Clement began work in earnest. Step by step the bloody monarch was forced backward, and his blows were parried and beaten down, until at last, from sheer exhaustion, his grip was loosened and a deft blow sent his sword flying into the wings. A moment later Richmond's victorious troops were cheering over the death of Gloster and the play was ended.

A couple of solicitous actors helped Bandmann to his feet. Panting and almost breathless, he flung his arms about Clement, kissed him on both cheeks and exclaimed, "It cost me a hundred and fifty, but it was wort' it."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Kings Who Have Murdered.

King Louis II. of Bavaria, the elder brother and predecessor of "mad King Otto," killed a couple of men during his reign, one in a fit of fury, the other by accident, while he drowned a third—his medical attendant—he himself succumbing at the same time.

The late King John of Saxony became insane three days prior to the date officially declared to be that of his death. His madness first assumed a violent form at a grand court ball, and 24 hours later he shot or killed with his sword one of his military aids.

The crown prince of Austria shot and killed the Baroness Marie Vetsera before he took his own life, one somber January morning.

The late Emperor of Russia shot and killed Count Reutern, one of the officers of his household, under the impression that the count was a nihilist and a would be assassin. The count approached the czar in the dark at Gatchina, and as he neared the emperor made a movement that led his majesty to believe that the stranger was getting some weapon ready for murder. Without an instant's hesitation Alexander drew a revolver and shot the man dead, realizing too late his terrible mistake.

The father-in-law of the Infanta Eulalia of Spain, the late Duke of Montpensier, was responsible for the death of his cousin, Prince Henry of Bourbon, whom he shot in a duel at Madrid.

It was called a duel, but some would call it murder. The adversaries were to fire alternately, and, Prince Henry's bullet flying wide of the mark, the Duke of Montpensier walked quietly up to the prince and shot him through the head.—Pearson's Weekly.

He Kept His Seat.

During one of the naval engagements of the late war a sailor by the name of John Davis performed an act of bravery that has rarely been equaled. While the battle was at its height a shell entered the Valley City, of which ship Davis was gunner's mate, and exploded on the berth deck, setting it on fire.

Captain Chaplin, the commander of the vessel, jumped down into the magazine, and while directing his men to extinguish the flames passed up with his own hands the loose cylinders of powder. The fireworks on board became ignited. Rockets whizzed and blue lights blazed up in the very midst of the ammunition. The shellroom caught fire, and it seemed as if the Valley City must be blown to pieces.

John Davis, appreciating the danger and desirous of doing all in his power to avert it, jumped up on an open barrel of gunpowder and sat down on the head, covering it with his person as well as he could to protect it from the showering sparks.

Captain Chaplin, seeing him quietly seated while everybody else was at work, ordered him in peremptory tones to "get down and help put out the fire." The young gunner's mate staid where he was and replied calmly:

"Don't you see, sir, I can't, for if I do the sparks will fall into the powder. If I get down, captain, we shall all go up."

Notwithstanding the terrible danger, Captain Chaplin could not repress a smile, and Davis' heroic action was rewarded after the battle by immediate promotion.—Youth's Companion.

The Bookseller.

I must at once discriminate between the bookseller and the publisher, as it is the former with whom I have to do on the present occasion. There was not always a distinction between the one and the other, as the Lintots, the Curlls and the Tonsons, though they designated themselves booksellers, were at the same time publishers, and it was only in the early years of the present century that booksellers who published books ceased to style themselves booksellers. The bookseller of today is to be regarded as a book distributor and not as a book producer. It has become a fashion in some quarters to belittle his occupation and not afford him the place which he should occupy in the commonwealth of letters. That he has an important place to fill and that he seeks to fill it with all his faculties, I hold. That there are booksellers and booksellers I will at once freely admit, and to those who have entered a profession for which they have neither ability nor qualifications I give but scant courtesy.—Academy.

Pat Sheedy's Lament.

"Show me a gambler with a bank account. Show me one with a bit of real estate. You can't do it. Pat Sheedy, hasn't got any of it. If he had, would he be chasing around the most obscure corners of the earth? No, sir. I can't gamble here, and I must gamble to live. I make my living at it, and a poor living it is. If I had money, I wouldn't scour the earth for games to play. I'd stay right here." Thus says Pat Sheedy, the greatest gambler of them all.—Boston Herald.
